REDS ACCEPT KOREA PEACE TALK OFFER

Degenerate Kills Self As Posse Closes In on Him after Girl Freed

FLEMINGTON, N. J., July 2—(P)—Meek-looking Warren Lee Irwin ended his bloody career of murder, kidnap and rape by firing a bullet into his brain in a rain-drenched clump of poison ivy.

Carolyn Barker
(Desperado's last captive safe)

The target of New Jersey's greatest manhunt was found shortly after noon (EST) Sunday—sprawled on his back, a trickle of blood still oozing from a .33 caliber bullet hole in his left temple.

The body of the 27-year-old desperado lay about one-quarter of a mile from where he abandoned 17-year-old Carolyn Barker, his last captive, and plunged into the woods to escape capture Saturday.

State police and FBI agents said Irwin definitely killed himself, thus carrying out his grim vow that he'd never be taken alive.

The comely high school girl, kidnaped by Irwin in Washington Thursday night and ravished six times during her 41 hours of captivity, was not told of his suicide. She was taken back to a Washington hospital Saturday night for rest and treatment.

Before leaving, Miss Barker, still visibly shaken by her ordeal of horror, said she hoped Irwin suffered before he was captured.

In Detroit, his tollworn mother of 59, Mrs. Marie Irwin, heard of his death over the radio after voicing the hope he'd be taken alive. She broke down in uncontrolled sobs and secluded herself in her room.

"No matter what he has done he is still my son—my only son. I still love him," she had told newsmen while the hunt was on.

Two volunteers in a Piper Cub plane spotted Irwin's body almost 24 hours to the minute after he took to the woods in this quiet west central Jersey farm town. (Please turn to Page Ten)

7 Communists Sent to Prison; 4 More Hunted

Convicted of Plot To Use Violence Against Government

NEW YORK, July 2—(P)—Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan today ordered seven top Communists to begin serving prison terms and issued bench warrants for four who failed to surrender.

Ten of the 11 had been sentenced to five years imprisonment for teaching the violent overthrow of the United States government. One had received a three year term.

Those ordered arrested were Henry Winston, 35, organizational secretary of the party; Gus Hall, 39, Ohio State chairman; Robert Thompson, New York state chairman, and Gilbert Green, 43, Illinois chairman.

All had been at liberty under bail of $20,000 each, furnished by the Civil Rights Congress, which the U. S. attorney general's office has branded as subversive.

Thompson had received the lesser sentence of three years because of his war record.

Judge Ryan ruled that bail of the four will be forfeited if they do not appear in court by 9:30 A. M. (EST) Tuesday.

The court issued the commitment order after denying all motions by the defense to reduce, modify or postpone the sentences, which had been upheld by the United States supreme court. Harry Sacher of defense counsel had asked that the sentences be (Please turn to Page Two)

Russia's Truce Move Purpose

By JAMES D. WHITE
SAN FRANCISCO, July 2—(P)—In promoting a cease-fire in Korea, the Russians may be trying to delay, if not avoid altogether, arming Red China—an unwieldy ally.

The Chinese armies in Korea desperately need more firepower and air cover.

That possibility has been implicit in the situation from the moment Soviet delegate Jacob Malik made the suggestion in a radio speech recently. Apparently ly Russia suggested an armistice without consulting Red China. The Kremlin rarely makes a major move for any one single reason. So it is possible, of course, that Russia already has committed itself to provide the large number of planes, tanks and guns the Chinese must have if they are to carry out their threat to drive "American imperialist aggressors" off the Korean peninsula.

It may be a stall for time. It is almost certainly to be assumed that the Chinese have been pressing for such aid. For classic reasons if geography and politics it is almost as likely that the Russians would hesitate to give it.

The key to eventual control of Asia is control of Japan, just as Britain is the strategic vantage point for dominance of Europe.

Russia and Red China may be cooperating fully on the question of a Japanese peace treaty just at this time when it is of critical importance because of American efforts to achieve a peace settlement without the dictation of Communist terms—and therefore without Communist participation. But it would be assuming a great deal to think that Chinese and Russian interests will coincide in the end when the chips go down for the control of all Asia.

By seeking a cease-fire in Korea now, the Russians could easily be trying to escape the demands of Mao Tze-Tung for real armament aid, and to avoid building China up as a future competitor for Japan and Asia.

The reason the Chinese have agreed to a cease-fire conference is that the internal situation in China has changed since they embarked upon their intervention in Korea.

Westerners who left Red China shortly after this adventure began report that the great mass of Chinese, who are not Communist, offered no noticeable objection.

Moreover, initial Chinese success in Korea outweighed in the Chinese mind any natural misgivings that China might be doing a job for Russia.

The frightful toll of Chinese life, estimated in the hundreds of thousands, has changed all this.

There has been time for Chinese to realize their soldiers are dying like flies in Korea—with no air cover. There has been time for the idea to sink in that unless Russia provides the necessary tools for victory in Korea, the best China can hope for is an indefinite stalemate.

Gestures Made At Face-Saving In Commie Reply

Fighting Continues At Battlefront, but Peace Hopes Grow

By OLEN CLEMENTS
TOKYO, July 2—(P)—Red Korea tonight urged its soldiers to fight on while the world waited for news of an expected armistice.

Pyeongyang radio repeated Chinese and North Korean acceptance of a United Nations proposal for cease-fire talks.

But the Reds made this clear: they are claiming victory in the year-old conflict.

The North Korean Communist station started each broadcast with this statement:

"The Anglo-American aggressors have at last realized failure of their sinister attempt and that is why they are seeking peace."

Between news items the Communist announcers inserted these statements:

"Soldiers on the front, fight bravely and continue annihilation of aggressors," and "anti-aircraft batteries, aim sharp and increase the bag of enemy intruders."

Japanese radio monitors, who heard the Red broadcasts, said the Communist tone was even stronger than usual.

Peiping radio repeated the text of the Communist acceptance statement last night.

Face-Saving Maneuver

The Reds first announced over the two stations Sunday night that they are willing to meet UN representatives and discuss a cease-fire. They want the meeting held in the Kaesong area between July 10 and 15.

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, supreme Allied commander, had proposed Saturday that a meeting be held aboard the Danish hospital ship Jutulandia in Wonsan Harbor. He said he would propose a date, if the Reds agreed to the meeting.

Ridgway has not indicated his reaction to the Red acceptance message.

It is presumed, however, that the UN will agree to the Reds' proposed place and time.

Diplomatic circles in Washington said Ridgway already has his full instructions and authority to deal with the Communists.

And Fighting Goes On

The world talked of peace, but it was "business as usual" on the fighting lines.

There were bitter ground skirmishes at scattered points.

Allied warplanes threw another heavy blow at the Hwangju airfield north of Sariwon in the northwest. Other planes hit supply centers, rail and road lines, bridges, troop concentrations and gun positions. B-29 Superforts hit (Please turn to Page Two)

July 4 Holiday Plans Here Stress Pleasures

Fayette County's residents prepared today for their own special kind of independence on Independence Day, Wednesday, July Fourth.

Stores, factories, businesses and county, city and state offices were planning to close their doors to permit employees an opportunity to enjoy the holiday. There will be no Record-Herald published Wednesday.

While there were no definite announcements, it has been the custom for stores that close regularly on Thursday afternoon to remain open then when there is another holiday that week.

Although no parade has been planned in Washington C. H., big plans were being made for the celebration at the Washington Park swimming pool on Wednesday.

Fred Pierson, pool manager said an elaborate program has been planned for the day. It will feature contests for all present, a swimming pageant, diving exhibition, swimming contest and a 50-50 dance.

Contests, for which winners will be eligible for a host of prizes donated by downtown Washington C. H. merchants, will get underway at 3 P. M. Prizes will be awarded for winners of a diving and wading contest, and awards will be presented to the largest immediate family at the pool and youngest and oldest persons at the pool.

In the evening there will be outdoor movies, including a cartoon show for the kids and a field and stream film about fishing for the adults.

The pool will be closed at 9:30 P. M., and a 50-50 dance (round and square dancing) will be held, with Carl Wilt's band to provide the music.

Meantime, many residents of the county prepared to take to the highways July Fourth, to visit friends and relatives, to take short drives in this area or to start their vacations.

Since fireworks are banned there will be no large outburst of firecrackers on the day. The drive-in theatre planned the only commercial display of fireworks in the area Tuesday night.

The Post Office will not make any regular mail deliveries on the day, although special delivery matter will be distributed.

Typhoon Claims 13

TOKYO, July 2—(P)—A typhoon caused at least 13 deaths and damaged much property yesterday on Kyushu, southernmost island of Japan.

It is the season of the year when the big moths are much in evidence. When Henry Sparks brought a huge moth into this office, it proved to be a fine specimen of cecropia, the largest moth native to this part of the United States.

These big fellows have about five inches spread and sometimes even more.

They are varied in color, with distinguishing spots much resembling eyes of some animal, and probably meant to give the effect of an animal's face and thus frighten away curious birds or other predators.

Like all of the moths, the cecropia comes from a worm. In this particular instance the worm is an unusually large one which feeds on the leaves of trees.

Clyde Cramer had picked the big moth up somewhere and turned it over to Henry, who released it in some vegetation south of the rear part of the Record-Herald building.

The find climaxed a citywide

Controls Extended By Stop-gap Measure

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH
WASHINGTON, July 2—(P)—Senator Aiken (R-Vt.) said today an armistice in Korea might cause Congress to let price and wage controls die at the end of this month.

"I think an armistice, if one is negotiated, would pretty well wipe out whatever little need there may be now for those controls," Aiken declared.

President Truman signed on Saturday stopgap legislation continuing wage, price and rent controls through July 31. He acted a few hours before the midnight deadline when the controls program otherwise would have lapsed.

Congress approved the 31-day extension resolution Friday after the House had shelved temporarily a Senate-passed bill providing for an eight-month continuance of the law, with revisions.

The stopgap measure prohibits any price rollbacks this month—a ban which Price Director Michael V. DiSalle said would cost consumers some $10,000,000,000 a year if made permanent.

Revolt Fails In Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand, July 2—(P)—Bangkok buried its dead and treated its injured today as peace returned to the revolt-torn city.

An attempt by a Thai naval faction to overthrow the government of Premier P. Pibulsonggram ended in complete failure.

Two rebel admirals surrendered. Other naval officers fled the city, some in civilian clothes.

Pibulsonggram was back in government house. He was kidnaped by an armed naval patrol Friday, and freed Saturday night.

Marijuana Worth $500,000 Found Hidden in Seized Car

WASHINGTON, July 2—(P)—Seizure of $500,000 worth of illicit marijuana in the secret compartments of an automobile was reported today by police. It was reportedly the biggest single haul ever made in this country.

Announcement of the seizure came after federal narcotics agents and police abandoned a dramatic vigil over the car.

The around-the-clock watch was kept after police got reports that New York City hoodlums would try to snatch the automobile.

Police and treasury agents said they learned of the existence of (Please turn to Page Ten)

Airline Crash Probe Started

AERIAL VIEW (TOP) OF THE SPOT on 10,000-foot-high Crystal Mountain near Fort Collins, Colo., where a giant United Airlines DC-6 tore a 500-foot swath through the timber as it crashed, carrying 50 persons to their death. Aboard the giant plane, enroute from San Francisco to Chicago, were 45 passengers including a year-old child, and a crew of five.

Fort Collins, Colo., July 2—(P)—Investigators piecing together the story of Colorado's worst air tragedy believe the 50 persons aboard a United Airlines DC-6 had no warning death loomed in the cloud-shrouded Rockies.

None lived to tell of the final moments Saturday on Flight 610, making its first San Francisco-Chicago run after a 10-day pilot strike.

The bodies, torn apart like the broken plane and gathered gently yesterday, are being identified in the national guard armory here, a makeshift morgue under military guard.

The plane had stopped briefly at Salt Lake City and headed for its next stop at Denver. Aboard were four persons going to funeral homes.

Forest Fire and Flood Devastate Vast Areas

(By The Associated Press)
The twin fury of fire and flood today gripped seven states after laying waste vast sections of forest and farm land.

Flames already have seared at least 85,850 acres of forest. A half million acres of bottomland in Kansas and Missouri have been washed by rampant waters.

Fresh fires burst anew in some stricken forest sections, timberland torched by lightning. And in the flood areas, swollen streams again threatened to spill over dikes and levees.

Arizona, in addition to the Apache National Forest, 5,550 acres of timber in the Crooke National Forest were reported lost.

California: Near Alturas in the northeast, flames already destroyed 1,500 acres as more than 400 loggers, forest service men and prisoners were pressed into service in the Modoc National Forest.

Washington and Oregon: Fire situation still acute. A 1,900 acre blaze in the Willamette National Forest near Eugene, Ore., was fought by 900 men. In northwestern Washington, a 450-acre area was under fire.

The Pacific northwest's biggest fire was in British Columbia where an uncontrolled blaze raged over 20,000 acres of Vancouver Island. Foresters said only rain could stop the fire, but there was no rain in sight.

Two states were hit by floods —Kansas and Missouri—and a half million acres of bottomland have been inundated. Although flood waters have been generally receding, the big Arkansas River in Kansas washed away dikes despite efforts of volunteer workers.

Police said the man, Ray Waterfield, 39, a truck driver, got on the roof of the three-story Horn Hotel and started an apparently unprovoked firing at motorists and pedestrians. There were no injuries reported.

City, state and sheriff's police closed off the area and set an ambush as thousands of residents came to the scene. Officers with machineguns, rifles, revolvers and tear gas closed in and critically wounded Waterfield in the chest, arms and leg. Attendants at St. John's Hospital said he is expected to recover.

Physician Is Accused Of Killing for Money

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 2—(P)—A Danbury, Conn., physician today was accused of causing the death of an elderly spinster with whom he lived "in order to get her property."

In official findings filed in superior court, resigned County Coroner Theodore E. Steiber charged Dr. Donald F. Gibson "premeditated or caused" the death of Miss Elizabeth M. Ayres, 74.

The report said another Danbury doctor, Dr. Frank Genovese, also was criminally responsible in the death.

Miss Ayres, who died a year ago, made Dr. Gibson the sole heir to her estate estimated at $65,000 to $100,000.

Steiber, whose report was predated before his June 15 resignation and based on a lengthy inquiry held last summer, said the evidence he heard "warrants an indictment for homicide."

City Is Terrorized By Berserk Sniper

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 2—(P)—A berserk sniper spread terror in Springfield's downtown section yesterday for an hour before he fell wounded in a hail of police fire.

Police said the man, Ray Waterfield, 39, a truck driver, got on the roof of the three-story Horn Hotel and started an apparently unprovoked firing at motorists and pedestrians. There were no injuries reported.

Another Subdivision Laid Out For City South of Elm Street

A second Belle-Aire addition to the city is now in process of being officially put through.

The proposed new subdivision adjoins the Belle-Aire tract on the south. It is laid out for 43 lots.

Belle-Aire stretches two blocks deep along the south side of West Elm Street.

The original Belle-Aire subdivision was opened about five years ago and now has 45 homes in it. All of them have been built in the last five years.

A petition was placed before the Board of Fayette County Commissioners at its regular meeting Monday morning in the Court House for the board's approval for removal of this land from county to city jurisdiction. The petition was officially granted.

It covers a new nine-acre addition which already has been laid out in lots, from the G. Damon Baker farm, now owned by the Belle-Aire Development Company. The next step by the owners is an appearance before the city council to petition that the new territory to be accepted as property within the corporation.

The only other business before the county commissioners Monday were mere routine matters such as passing on bills and discussing a few matters for future official consideration.

Newsman Accused by Reds of Spying

By DAN DELUCE

FRANKFURT, Germany, July 2—(P)—Associated Press Correspondent William N. Oatis went on trial in Prague, Czechoslovakia, this morning charged with spying for the United States.

Two official observers from the American embassy went to the state court in Pankrac Prison for the first session which opened at 8 A. M. (2 A. M. EST).

Reached by telephone from Frankfurt, an official of the Czechoslovak Information Ministry said the trial was going on nage is so preposterous it will deceive no one in the free world."

Oatis, 37-year-old newspaperman from Marion, Ind., was arrested April 23 and has been held in jail without a chance to see a lawyer, friend or U. S. diplomatic representative. He is the first reporter holding American citizenship to be arrested by an iron curtain country.

The Czech government charged Oatis on April 27 with "securing and verifying certain secret reports" and spreading "material insulting to the Czechoslovak republic and its order."

Tax-paying Period Ends--Mail Checked

Tax paying time for Fayette County property owners came to an end officially last Saturday at noon.

But, Treasurer Charles A. Fabb said it would be difficult to tell just how much had been collected during the period and how much remained on the books unpaid until after all the payments that came in by mail during the week and had been posted and the books balanced.

Just before the end of the collection period, the treasurer said taxes were "coming in very slowly." He warned that "unless payments come in by mail, there will be one of the biggest last-minute rushes in years."

There was a big rush or jam at the pay-in windows in the treasurer's office in the Court House Saturday; so, it is possible that their was a heavy mail facing the treasurer's staff Monday morning.

The seven ordered to jail were Eugene Dennis, 44, general secretary of the party; John B. Williamson, 46, labor secretary; Jacob Stachel, 49, educational director; and Irving Potash, 46; national committeeman, all of whom had been out in $30,000 bail each; John Gates, 36, editor of the Daily Worker; Carl Winter, 43, Michigan state chairman, and Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., 46, former New York City councilman, who had been free in $20,000 bail each.

Sentence Stands

Judge Ryan refused to suspend or modify the sentence of Stachel, whose attorney, Abraham J. Iserman, pleaded that Stachel was suffering from a heart ailment and incarceration would be cruel and unusual punishment.

The court ordered the warden of the institution to which Stachel is sent must file within 30 days "a detailed medical report" and "the probable effect incarceration might have."

On receipt of such a report, the court said "it will receive consideration by the court as to whether any reduction of sentence should be made to Stachel."

Dennis, who acted as his own attorney during the nine-month trial, asked for outright suspension of sentence on all 11, stating that "when these defendants are imprisoned the first amendment will be incarcerated as well."

Reds Accept Offer

military barracks at Hungnam on the east coast.

United Nations naval forces continued to blockade and pound the North Korean east coast.

Heaviest ground fighting of the day apparently was on the western front. An Allied patrol stormed a hill north of Yonchon. The foot troops killed 33 Reds and captured four. The Allies withdrew and called down an air and artillery barrage. Another 30 or 40 Reds were killed or wounded.

There was no action reported from Kaesong, the rubbled town on the western front where the Reds want to hold the negotiations. There have been reports the town has been abandoned by the Reds. The Kaesong area is the only place where the Reds have a foothold south of Parallel 38. It is about three miles south of that pre-war border.

Chinese Nationalists on Formosa predict cease-fire talks will be drawn out over a long period. They said the Reds asked that the talks be scheduled July 10 to 15 to give them an opportunity to consult with Moscow.

Delay Explanation

In Hong Kong, a gateway to Red China, many observers expressed the opinion the Reds have tentatively agreed to future peace in Korea for a reason, they say the next step will be a Russian demand for greater voice in the proposed Japanese peace treaty.

The Communist agreement to meet for cease-fire talks was broadcast by Peiping radio late Sunday night. The statement was repeated by North Korea's Pyongyang radio.

The message was addressed to General Ridgway and signed by Premier Kim Il Sung, supreme commander of the Red Korea army, and Peng Teh-Huai, commander of the Red Chinese "volunteers."

The Communists have two face-saving reasons for not wanting the meeting in Wonsan. First, it would indicate the Reds had complied completely with Ridgway's proposals. Second, any meeting held deep inside Red Korea would shatter their propaganda theme that they had won the war.

No ready explanation was offered by qualified sources for the delay asked by the Reds. It may be that they want extra time to complete the buildup of their forces on the western front.

PEACE HOPE GROWS

WASHINGTON, July 2—(AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway has full authority and instructions for dealing with the Communist proposal that Korean armistice talks open next week.

The initial reaction here showed no objection to accepting the Communist proposals on time and place. The specific dates suggested were July 10 to 15; the place, near Kaesong, a town two miles south of the 38th Parallel.

Hopes for an early end to the war in Korea were steadily mounting, although state department officials kept a tight rein on any strong optimism. They emphasized that the agreement to hold truce talks, though making peace a definite possibility, leaves unsolved the whole problem of working out cease-fire terms acceptable to both sides.

Demand was good in the steel and railroad sections. Other major divisions gathered in a smaller share of buying at generally higher prices. Automobiles had difficulty in remaining ahead. Western Union added nearly 2 points after an agreement headed off a threatened strike.

Grain Market

CHICAGO, July 2—(AP)—Grains rolled upward on the Board of Trade today, scoring substantial gains.

Soybeans came ahead strongly toward the close on a burst of short-covering. Gains ranged close to the 10-cent daily limit.

Wheat led the early advance and was up more than 3 cents at one time. Buying in this cereal was based in good part on news of a 19 cent higher government support level on 1951 grain than prevailed on 1950 wheat.

The market was not upset by the progress being made toward a cease-fire in Korea.

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON, July 2—(AP)—Here are some of the main points to keep in mind as the talk about peace in Korea gets more complicated.

In November, 1943, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill met in Cairo with Chiang Kai-Shek when the generalissimo still was big boss in China.

They agreed, when Japan was whipped, Formosa should be given back to China. The Japanese had taken it from here in the war with China in 1895. Later the Chinese Communists won control of China.

Chiang and the remnants of his troops fled to Formosa. The Chinese Reds wanted the island. They claimed to be the only rightful government of China and therefore said they were entitled to it.

This country hasn't recognized their government. And when they got into the Korean fighting, we threw a fleet around Formosa to keep the Communists from getting it.

And, although the Chinese Reds demanded a seat in the United Nations, on the same grounds that they were the rightful government of China, we opposed them there most vigorously after they got into Korea.

But in January, 1951, when the Chinese Communists were still winning in Korea, a plan was approved in the UN for ending the fighting. This plan, supported by the United States, proposed:

1. A cease-fire in Korea, with assurances it wouldn't be used as a screen for a new Chinese attack.

2. Once the cease-fire was agreed upon, it should be followed by talks on further steps for restoring peace in Korea.

3. Bit by bit—in phases, the diplomats say—all foreign troops should be pulled out of Korea and, under UN supervision, the Korean people could vote on the kind of government they wanted.

4. Meanwhile, after the cease-fire was arranged, the UN would begin work to consider a number of problems, including Formosa and Red China's representation in the UN.

The Chinese Communists rejected this, and offered their own plan. They refused to start peace talks with a cease-fire first. They demanded negotiations start on various problems before the shooting stopped at all. And they further demanded we remove our protection from Korea and that Red China be admitted to the UN.

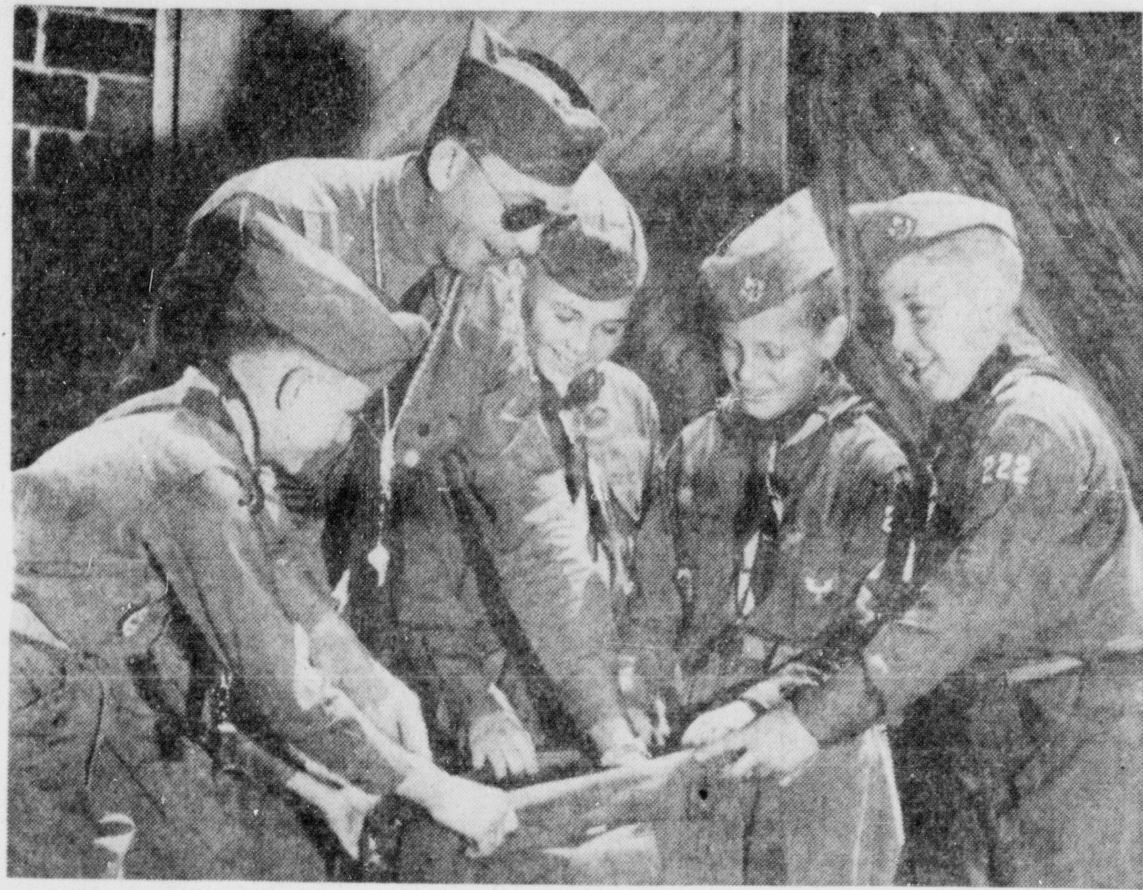

The United States rejected this. The fighting continued. The tide turned. Chinese spring offensives were smashed. They were driven north of the 38th parallel which separated North and South Korea. The war had started when the North Korean Communists had driven down over that parallel to attack the South Koreans.

On June 2, when we were making progress, Secretary of State Acheson said the U. S. might agree to a "cease-fire" on the 38th parallel but would not agree—as part of the peace terms—to discuss the fate of Formosa or admit the Chinese Reds to the UN. When the shooting is over, he said, those questions could be discussed. He proposed these four steps:

1. A cease-fire. (The two sides simply agree to stop shooting at a certain time and that's all. Nobody makes any promises about anything.)

2. Then an armistice. (This means the no-shooting agreement continues while arrangements are

Boy Scout Troop in Camp for Week

in turn will make better citizens of them, Scout leaders say.

Citizenship Training
French said Scout leadership is turned into community leadership "through the burning desire every boy has for adventure, fun and fellowship and satisfying these natural cravings in an organized camp life."

"He consciously learns to live as a good citizen in a Scout community and to get along with the other boys. He learns to accept his share of camp responsibilities and to take care of himself," French added.

While at the Scout reservation the boys will have many opportunities available to them. Under campcraft instructors they will learn cooking, axmanship, pack craft, out post camping, fire building, tent pitching, rope work and wilderness engineering.

Under the heading of woodcraft the Scouts may take up bird study, animal study, star study, tracking, compass, pathfinding, nature hikes and wilderness survival.

Aquatics and physical fitness are stressed in the camp by the youths taking part in such activities as swimming, boating, canoeing, life saving, life guard work, waterfront safety and waterfront games.

Probably the most inspiring of the camp activities is the troop building program section with its campfire ceremonies, games, Scout meetings, campfire songs, story telling and lessons on how to make camp gear.

Those from Washington, C. H. who want to visit the camp have an invitation to go to Camp Lazarus on visitors' day, Thursday. There will be special programs of interest to parents and friends.

Does Vacation Mean Going Far and Fast?

During a little social gathering at a home in this city a few nights ago one woman remarked to the other wives present "Let's insist that this year our husbands plan a vacation for the family. I would like to get out of the kitchen for a week or two. My family needs a rest and vacation more than my husbands to take a fishing trip."

Maybe that woman had something there. It is quite often that vacation plans are made for the benefit of the man of the house. He is supposed to furnish the family's living, therefore must get top consideration. Perhaps the wife and maybe other members of the family contribute through home work and economy about as much to the family's general welfare.

With the vacation season upon us there will be hundreds of Fayette County families planning some method of taking a few days or a few weeks to get away from office, store, factory, farm or household routine.

Many a family here at this moment is either enthusiastically or wishfully discussing "going away somewhere". There is talk of possible destinations, dates and how things can be arranged.

Right now highways are crowded with tourist cars as "go-happy" people rush here and there in search of change and relaxation. Many find a change but all too few enjoy relaxation.

Vacation travel can become strenuous unless there is a display of common sense on the part of those who indulge in it. Whether you go to mountain, lake or seashore leisurely travel should be the first rule. Select a method and place which fit well into your vacation period.

Frequently it is possible to find an ideal spot within a short distance of the old home-stand. Those who return home to brag about how far and how fast they travelled will get little rest and relaxation from their trip. It will take longer than their vacation to "get over it".

What's that you said? You are leaving tomorrow? You expect to drive 500 miles the first day? Well, goodbye and good luck.

A Promising Field

With Senator George predicting World War III unless the fighting in Korea is wound up soon, with fear of the Communists apparently dominating United Nations thinking, with Western Europe dragging its feet on defense to the reported deep concern of General Eisenhower and with America's rapid build-up of strength the sole hopeful factor for free nations, the question arises whether another field which holds promise for the confusion of the Kremlin is being fully exploited.

That rich field is the normal and natural popular resentment toward the ways of dictators to be found behind the Iron Curtain.

Far East reports reveal China seething as a result of a tragically low standard of living and a despotic system that sets relative against relative, friend against friend, and that murders the betrayed.

An American non-government Committee for Free Europe is encouraging formation of national councils for each European country behind the Iron Curtain. Unfortunately the work is handicapped by an agreement at Yalta requiring the return by the Western Allies of all Soviet citizens. These are then executed or imprisoned. Russia has violated virtually every Yalta agreement. But Washington adheres to the letter of this one.

Price of crude rubber has been slashed, but autoists are warned not to expect lower tire prices. The air has not been deflated, presumably.

Diet and Health Parathyroid Glands Cause Bone Disease

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

The body is precisely geared to use just so much and no more of the many powerful chemicals which its various glands produce. Thus, either under- or over-production by any one of these structures is bound to result in disease.

We hear very little about the so-called parathyroid glands, located in the neck just behind the thyroid gland, and yet they perform an important function, secreting the hormone which controls the calcium content of the blood.

Tiny Glands

When these tiny glands, which usually number from four to eight, begin to secrete too much of their hormone, the disorder known as Von Recklinghausen's disease of the bone results. Calcium is pulled out of the bones into the blood stream and the bones are softened to the extent that fractures occur even without injury. Bone cysts often develop.

Along with the piling up of calcium in the blood, there is a marked decrease in the amount of phosphorus. Over-production on the part of the thyroid glands may be the result of a tumor of the gland or merely of its working overtime.

Kidney Stones

Because of the high excretion of phosphorus and calcium in the urine, kidney stones are formed in 80 per cent of the patients with this condition. Many times this disease is first recognized when the patient consults his doctor because of severe pain due to the kidney stones. The doctor, seeking to find the cause of the kidney stones, discovers that the patient has Von Recklinghausen's disease of the bone.

Blood tests showing a high amount of calcium and a low amount of phosphorus help in the diagnosis of this condition. There is also an increase in the phosphorus and calcium in the urine. The muscular tone is weakened because of the excessive amount of calcium.

Inflammation of the cornea or front part of the eye is very common. There may be annoying dryness in the mouth and throat, and nausea and vomiting.

X-ray examination of the bones shows a characteristic lack of calcium and therefore the bones are not as clearly visible on the X-ray plate.

Treatment consists in the removal of the humor of the parathyroid gland, if present, or removal of the over-functioning gland. Patients with this condition should have a diet low in calcium and high in fluids. This may be obtained very simply by omitting cheese and milk from the diet while increasing the fluid intake.

Phenobarbital is a drug used primarily as a sedative or a hypnotic to promote sleep. It is employed in certain cases of nervousness and epilepsy.

Weather for July To Be Below Normal

WASHINGTON, July 2—(AP)—Rainfall is expected to be subnormal in the southern and western portions of the country, but near normal elsewhere, the Weather Bureau said yesterday in its 30-day outlook.

The announcement said the outlook for July "calls for temperatures to average below seasonal normals in northern portions of the lakes, plains, and mountain states."

"Temperatures are expected to average above normal in the southern half of the country with greatest departures in the west and south. Elsewhere near normal temperatures are anticipated."

"Abundant showers are indicated in the northeast, midwest, and northern plains. Rainfall is expected to be subnormal in southern and western portions of the country and near normal elsewhere."

Wholesale Prices Take Slight Drop

WASHINGTON, July 2—(AP)—Wholesale prices fell off 0.3 percent in the week ended June 26, the Bureau of Labor statistics reported yesterday.

The bureau's over-all wholesale price index was still 15.1 percent higher than a year ago. All major price groups declined except metal and metal products, fuel and lighting materials.

From mid-May to mid-June farm prices dipped 1.3 percent the agriculture department said in a separate report. It was the fourth straight month farm prices fell, and brought them four percent under the record high of February. No new farm products rose to where they could be placed under price controls.

Just False Alarm! But What Trouble!

TOLEDO, July 2—(AP)—Toledo police answered a burglar alarm at a branch bank in something flat yesterday.

A fire blew out on one scout car five blocks from the bank, but officers commandeered a passing automobile to get to the scene. Another police crew discovered a flat tire as they pulled up in front of the building.

Luckily for police they had no bandits to pursue. It was a false alarm.

Life of Charity and Tolerance

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK —(P)—"Anybody can be a saint once in his lifetime," said the Rev. Anthony G. McCabe, "but it is the habit that counts."

And then the big, rugged 42-year-old Dominican priest said another thing, rather gently:

"Too many people hear only the noise of their own footsteps in this world, and cannot hear the cries of the starving."

Father McCabe, a former army chaplain who was orphaned before he was a year old, has been hunted by those cries all his life.

He now heads the mission of blessed Martin De Porres, a school for poverty-stricken Negro children in Columbia, S. C. Every few months he hitch-hikes to New York with a big smile on his face -- and his big hand held out for help to keep his mission going. And he gets it, too.

"Many of the contributors are Protestant and Jewish friends," he said, and laughed: "one of my Jewish friends raised funds by making a personal appeal to a Protestant congregation."

Father McCabe lost both his father and mother in a southern Illinois coal explosion.

"My mother had gone down into the mine to take my father's lunch," he explained.

He lived in an Alton, Ill., orphanage until the age of seven and then was adopted by a farmer. The chance reading of a religious magazine decided him as a boy to embrace the Dominican order, whose priests foreswear all worldly possessions and take rigorous vows of chastity, poverty and obedience.

Father McCabe went to the Pacific with the 165th regiment during the last world war. During the battle for Makin he buried 30 American dead with his own hands. He was awarded a purple heart after his jeep was blown up by a land mine on Saipan, and he was invalided home. The men lost in the island fighting still are close to his heart.

"If the lesson of sacrifice they taught us has not been learned," he said soberly, "it is not their fault. I pray for them every day."

He has one amusing memory from those sad days. Once his Catholic boys made him a four-foot long rosary of seashells. Some Protestant and Jewish soldiers in the regiment immediately countered by making the chaplain an eight-foot seashell rosary.

Life Is Fragile in Age of Speed

By George Sokolsky

We are so sure, so positive, so full of ourselves. Then something happens to bring us close to the knowledge of how fragile we are, how fragile life itself is. I recall when Winston Churchill was knocked down on Fifth Avenue, how Fritz Kreisler was knocked down by a truck. Churchill lived to lead his country through blood, sweat and tears. Kreisler has been spared for a world that loves him.

These thoughts came to me as for a moment it seemed as though all of us, nearly an entire family, in the best of cheer, off on a summer holiday, faced the immediate possibility of sudden death. It does not take more than a split second to discover humility -- and thankfulness to a gracious god.

Our car was standing stark still on an approach to the west side highway, not more than five minutes from home. We were moving from the big city to a farm I have in Massachusetts. All winter we look forward to the day when we shall make our annual return to the woods and a few weeks of closeness to nature. We were waiting to get into the line of traffic.

Then came, at a terrific rush, a policeman on a motorcycle. He apparently was after a speeder or something. Suddenly we felt the impact of his machine into our car. He fell over his machine. To us, it seemed as though he had flown into the air and soon enough, too soon, we heard his groans. We only suffered damage to our car, but we suffered emotionally with him. It might have been us.

For hours we waited. And it was impossible not to think of how the courtesy of the road seems to have disappeared altogether. Few drivers put their hands out to signal changes of destination or slowing up. Few ever think of warning the car behind them of sudden stops. On country roads at night, it is not rare to see bright lights undimmed for passing cars even though a collision might result from such negligence.

But the worst offenders seem to be gabby folk who hold conferences while driving and lovers who believe the closeness makes the road more safe.

One becomes more conscious of these infractions after a first accident. If there had been no speeder, the motorcycle policeman would not so suddenly have taken to the chase and none of this might have happened, imperiling his life and almost ending ours. Perhaps after the speeder reaches his destination, there was nothing to get there for. Yet, there could have been half a dozen deaths because he did not follow the rules of the road.

It is not only the rules of the road that we so often ignore; it is the rules of life itself. For there are rules which the whole experience of the human race, at whatever level of culture, does accept. The Senate committee which is now meeting to consider ethics in government faces the same problem that we did in our collision; it is not so much the law as it is decency, which comes down to the simplicities of the ten commandments and the Golden Rule and such aphoristic statements of right.

The simple rules of life suffice when all the complexities of laws and regulations do not. Most men do not commit murder because they fear the law. Probably when a man shoots an adulterous wife, he never thinks of the law. His emotions are vengeful; he does not think at all and all the laws on all books from Hammurabi to Fulbright will not check his hand, unless deeply ground into his character is the simple statement: "Thou shalt not kill."

That command originates not from legislation or personal decision. It reaches him from outside himself, from God, not as a request or a suggestion, not with explanations or reasons -- but as a direct statement of what is expected of him. Vengeance is the Lord's, not man's. The transference is important, for it withdraws from us altogether many of the emotional reactions which lead to indecencies, improprieties, wrongs. If we reject the commandment, we imperil not only ourselves, but all men.

Analyzing the various criticisms of the American government and even American life of our day, it would seem that most of our social ills, attributable to what is so lightly called "modern," "up-to-date," "progress," really are bad manners and degraded morals. # Colombia's 'Old Man of Emeralds'

By BERNICE GOETZ
Central Press Correspondent
BOGOTA, Colombia—Despite its green glitter, assessing the world's biggest mined supply of emeralds can be a grueling work! So says Colombia's "Old Man of Emeralds" as Christopher Dixon is familiarly known to residents of Bogota, the country's capital.

For months, Bogotanos gazed curiously after the stately 83-year-old gentleman in the Homburg hat as he strode past the guards and into the dim vaults of the federal bank each morning.

Tray after tray of emeralds from the government-controlled Muzo mines were set before him. Through his blue-veined fingers sifted a collection of gems which outranked the wealth of rajahs. However, the mild-mannered Englishman was only surveying the fruits of his own labors!

Dixon had earned the reputation of recovering more gems in the four years he managed the Muzo mines than the Spaniards extracted in any century.

When the Colombian government decided to evaluate its fabulous reserve of stones for the first time in many years, Dixon was top choice for the job and has remained its official appraiser.

"I am always looking for perfection," Chris Dixon still says, "that gota de aceite which is the finest of all emeralds with a velvety green that matches a drop of oil."

ANYWHERE else in the world the flashing prisms between his fingers might have been of common beryl in hues of gold, pink and aquamarine—but not in Colombia!

Here in the Andean highlands, Mother Nature with her flare for piquancy had added a dash of chronic oxide in certain mountain valleys which had produced the green which is uniquely the rock-borne emerald.

The Chibcha Indians of Colombia first revealed their source of supply to invading Spaniards by their trade of emeralds and salt for gold from their lowland neighbors. In a more distant valley however, the Chivor mine remained hidden successfully until rediscovered no more than 40 years ago.

Emerald-conscious Colombians mark the price tag of their favorite stone by its source—Muzo or Chivor. Muzo emeralds are noted for their depth of color while those from the Chivor mines now run by a syndicate of jewelers, may be all shades of grass-green but have greater brilliance.

Christopher Dixon studies fragment of rock crystal for emerald.

Generally amazing to the layman is the fact that emeralds are nearly always flawed. The hexagonal crystallizations found in the best stones are called "jardines" or "gardens" with Latin grace.

"Emeralds are found in a sandwich-formation," says Dixon, "many times 50 to 300 feet thick. Lying loosely in nests of 20 to 50 stones, they are found varying from the thickness of a needle to prisms of hundreds of carats."

With his blue eyes lighting in recollection, Dixon declares: "Once I had the pleasure of extracting with my own fingertips, a stone weighing 2,333 carats! It was almost without a blemish, deep and fiery."

HISTORY, too, has flamed around the emerald. Nero fiddled not only while Rome burned but with a monocle of clear-cut emerald while Christians were being martyred.

Cleopatra's love of the gem almost depleted her own Egyptian emerald mines so that today, there is little of value left in them. The only other known source of emeralds is in the Ural Mountains of Siberia—behind the Iron Curtain!

Oddly enough, a single emerald splinter nine inches long was once found in North Carolina.

Around the Colombia emeralds stored in Bogota on Apr. 9, 1948, licked the fires set by revolutionaries when they sacked and looted government buildings in that uprising. However, the vaults filled with green fire remained intact.

SOME of the fabulous emeralds given as ransom to the Conquistador Francisco Pizarro by the Inca Atahualpa were eventually found in Popayan, Colombia, a dreamy colonial town. Old Spanish families that had secreted the gems gave them up in a religious fervor to be made into the Crown of the Andes.

The finest goldsmiths of the Old and New World took six years to complete the Crown which had 17 pear-shaped emerald pendants and a principal emerald weighing 45 carats, said to have been taken from the person of Atahualpa himself.

Nicolas II, last czar of Russia, revealed that these Colombian stones exceeded those in his own collection when he attempted to purchase the Crown in 1910.

Only the Bolshevik revolution prevented it from falling into Russian hands. In 1939, the Crown was sold to a syndicate of American jewelers to be broken up into smaller and more saleable stones.

The emerald itself has not been without an aura of superstition from the time it was worn as scarabs by the Egyptians. More recent beliefs are that the stone aids childbirth, improves digestion and soothes the eyes.

We wouldn't know about the first two contentions—but it certainly does the third!

Hunt for Mystery Fever Virus By Science Is To Cover World

By HAROLD K. MILKS
NEW DELHI, July 2 (AP)—If you like detective stories here is news of a whopper, one that may spread over most of the known world and take years to reach a final solution.

It's the hunt for a master criminal against health, the culprit responsible for mysterious ailments which medical experts of several continents now charge to "fever of unknown origin."

The quasi-official Indian council for medical research and the Rockefeller Foundation are joining scientific forces to track down this criminal. They will work from a research center somewhere in southern India but the clues they must follow may lead all over the world.

Their goal, under an agreement now under negotiation, is to match up various viruses already isolated and identified by earlier health detectives with diseases which have long mystified physicians, especially in the hot, tropical regions of Asia, Africa and South America.

Suspects Detained

Several suspects have been detained, isolated and identified among the viruses, those tiny invisible organisms which research may prove responsible for sudden burning fevers and other ailments common to tropical regions.

Some of these have been found in the jungles of Africa, where scientists of the Rockefeller Foundation and other research experts have long been at work. Others were located in the steaming river valleys of South America or on various Pacific islands including the Philippines.

The task of the Indian-Rockefeller project will be to link these suspects definitely to undiagnosed ailments, to prove by scientific certainty that certain viruses cause certain illnesses.

Heading India's representatives is Dr. C. G. Pandit, director of the Indian council of medical research and himself a veteran of Rockefeller Foundation's research activities.

Under Dr. Pandit, the Indian government and the council -- whose financial support comes directly from the Indian ministry of health -- will assign leading Indian medical experts to work with teams from the Rockefeller foundation.

Headquarters in India

Their headquarters in the hunt for the health criminals will be at one of India's medical centers. Most probable choice is Poona, a cool hill city three hours by train from Bombay.

There reports of viruses already isolated and identified will be studied. Then the search will start for similar viruses in victims of yet unidentified diseases, most of them strange fevers whose origins are still mysteries to medical science.

Attempts will be made to trace such virus infections from their most probable origin -- the presence of some biting insect usually regarded as virus carriers.

Hundreds of such fever cases must be studied. Laboratory examinations by the thousands must be completed.

Sponsors of the study hope it may answer that old question of what causes these "fever of unknown origin" so common among tropical people.

"Once we know what damage these viruses do and exactly what breakdowns in human health they cause, the work of finding a preventive may be easy," said one scientist.

But these hawkshaws of the test tubes and microscopes expect no quick solution to their case. They say it may take years.

Berkshire Luxury Palace Era Fades With Time --- Great Old Chateau-type Mansion Is Sold

BY JOHN B. KNOX
GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass.—A fantastic and fabulous era which sprinkled Massachusetts' famous Berkshire Hills with dream-like palaces is fading into history.

Sale of Barrington House, a great blue-stone mansion of French chateau style, to a New York Insurance Company is a symbol of a chapter's end.

This is the story of Barrington House, of Shadowbrook, of Ashfield, of Tanglewood, of Brookside, of Erskine Park, of many other estates and huge homes—still-standing monuments, to vanished men and another way of life. The families who lived in them bore names to conjure with Carnegie, Vanderbilt, Field and Biddle, Hopkins, Tytus, Adams and Stokes, Stuyvesant, Harriman, Crocker, Aspinwall and Sloane.

Barrington House was built 65 years ago. Into it and its surrounding meadows, the widow of railroad builder Mark Hopkins and her new husband poured part of Hopkins' Union Pacific millions. Older residents of this town can still remember the building of the enormous red-slate-turreted castle.

It was part and parcel of a golden age which filled the beauty spots of Newport, R. I., and of Lenox, Stockbridge, and other Berkshire towns, with romantic villas, unbelievable gardens, and state stately mansions. Mark Hopkins' widow lived but four years after her grand house was built. Then it passed to her amateur architect, decorator husband, Edward E. Searles.

Eventually, Barrington House—after a period of dust-gathering disuse—became a private school for girls. And now the basement will become a storage for the microfilm records of the Home Insurance Company of New York. The remainder of the property from which common folk were long barred will become a recreation center for the firm's employees.

A special quarry on a mile-distant mountainside provided stone for the big house and its thousands of yards of dressed stone walls. A specially-built railroad hauled the stone. Enroute, the trains crossed the Housatonic River on a bridge specially built for the railroad.

While millions of Americans in cities and towns still were strangers to the electric light, a private steam-electricity generating plant lighted the buildings on the estate.

But a private power plant was not unique, even then. Northward in villa-dotted Lenox, George Westinghouse built his spreading "Erskine Park" (one day also to become a school for girls). Not pleased with the glare of 1,500 electric bulbs, Mrs. Westinghouse suggested a special molding where ceilings joined walls.

Thus originated domestic indirect lighting.

Tanglewood—at the Stockbridge and Lenox town border—where Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his Tanglewood Tales—now is the home of the famous Berkshire Music Festivals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thousand-acre Shadowbrook, where Anson Phelps Stokes built a hundred-room grey-stone house with scarlet roof, later was the home of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and afterwards of Andrew Carnegie. A four-horse coach could have clattered up its main staircase. Now Shadowbrook is a Jesuit novitiate.

Stories handed down from Shadowbrook's heyday shed light on that era of vast house parties. A son of Stokes, coming home from Yale with some friends of the class of 1896 wired: "Coming home bringing some '96 men." Maybe the operator mis-cued. Perhaps his mother read too hastily. But she telegraphed this reply: "House full—room for only 40."

Outmatching even Shadowbrook was "Ashintully"—the estate of Robb de Peyster Tytus, Egyptologist. Some said the family had incurred the displeasure of Egypt's dead kings by disturbing their sleep.

Lenox was home to the Biddles, the Adamases, the Crockers, the Aspinwalls, the Stuyvesants, the Harrimans, and many another family of famous name. Neighboring Stockbridge, like Lenox, was filled with names and homes of the once-great as were other towns up and down the country.

Gardens sprang up that rivaled the centuries old gardens of Europe. Owners and agents combed Italy, France, the world, for iron-work, statuary, fountains. Imported foreign experts cunningly exploited every vista of mountain and lake and added man-made charm to the already-lovely landscape.

Beyond wall and hedge armies of gardeners spread an ever-changing prospect of flowers. There were swans, peacocks, and conservatories with tropical and semi-tropical flowers and fruits.

Gone today are the troops of immigrant servants who once made it possible for others to be gay in the many-roomed mansions. Hard-to-get (and pay for) are butlers, gardeners and other workers needed to keep up the grand air. So houses and gates have been closed. Dust gathers in rooms once bright with finery and laughter. Prospective dairy farmers and hotel operators have shopped among the "for sale" signs.

Some properties have been cut up for the more streamlined, and simpler estate of today. In these, unexpected luxury hides behind outward simplicity.

For Berkshire still is Berkshire and illustrious names sparkle in Berkshire directories. These are hailed as worthy successors to Bryant, to Longfellow, to Melville, to Hawthorne, to Edith Wharton, to the Sedgicks and others—even to George Francis Root.

You don't know Root? Oh yes you do. He wrote sentimental war songs that shook folks' hearts long years ago: "The Battle Cry of Mrs. Max Morrow, deputy grand matron, gave the invocation before the dinner and table decorations were in green and white with summer flowers and fern used effectively the full length of the tables.

Tall white tapers and green containers of mints with dainty scrolls of the 23rd Psalm marked each cover. In charge of the dining room were Dr. F. D. Woollard, chairman, Mr. Paul H. INSURANCE ADJUSTERS LEARN AUTO REPAIR TO DEAL MORE COMPETENTLY WITH CLAIMS

By Central Press

CHICAGO—Their normally neat garb and appearance are replaced by grimy coveralls and dirty hands. Their vocabulary becomes spiced with terms such as "dinging," "picking" and "spot welding."

It's all part of a unique training course which converts insurance men from white collar workers to a reasonable facsimile of an auto mechanic in the space of one week.

It isn't that the insurance men are leaving their field; they are merely receiving training which will enable them to work more competently with mechanics in handling claims for the seven companies of one insurance group.

A selected group of claim adjusters, from all parts of the United States and Canada, gather here for four weeks to receive training equivalent to many months of field work. Not all the time is spent on auto work; in fact, subjects range from the repair of auto bodies to the repair of the human body.

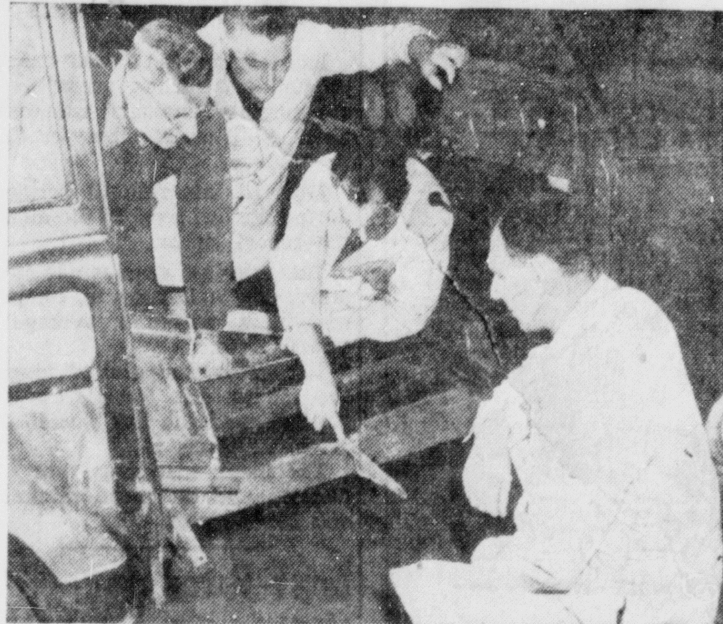

"Emphasis is placed on the auto work because of the increasing shortage of parts and rising costs," says J. M. Breen, educational director for the Kemper Insurance group. "This makes it more necessary than ever before for claim adjusters to be thoroughly familiar with repair work."

HE POINTS out that the auto course is designed to furnish the adjusters with a basic knowledge of operating methods of garages or body repair shops, time and expense involved, and an understanding of garage language.

"We don't expect these men to become expert mechanics," Breen says, "but we do feel that with this type of training, they will be able to do a better job for the insurance company and its policyholders."

Through actual work in a repair shop and watching demonstrations by a veteran auto body man, the claim adjusters learn whether auto parts should be repaired or replaced and which is more economical. They go over all body parts, learn their names, how they are repaired, how much time should be taken, and what the cost should be.

For example, labor charges in certain body repair shops are higher than in others. Therefore, since the claim man knows how long repair work should take, he frequently will be able to save money by ordering the part replaced. Ways also are explained and demonstrated to determine whether all damage claims are legitimate to prevent payment for damages not incurred in the most recent accident. Checking the rust on damaged parts often will serve as a guide in determining whether the damage was of recent origin.

The last day of the course is spent studying wrecked cars and making estimates of the damage. This is done under the guidance of body repair men who point out errors in the estimate and provide rules of thumb to aid in making future damage estimates.

"With this type of detailed training and experience," Breen explains, "the claim man now can go into a garage or repair shop on an accident case and talk the garage man's language."

"IN OTHER words, he will be able to discuss repair problems more intelligently and understand when the mechanic mentions 'dinging' and 'picking' he is referring to two of the steps necessary in straightening damaged body parts. Or, he will know that 'spot welding' means strengthening only the weakened spots by welding."

The other three weeks of training are devoted to a detailed study of anatomy, conducted by a physician, a study of insurance contracts and legal subjects related to every day work of the adjuster, and an explanation and discussion of the latest trends and developments in the insurance field.

An analysis of the principal policies sold is given by expert insurance men so the adjuster will have a better knowledge of what the policyholder expects and deserves. Actual claim problems also are set up for them to solve.

THE ANATOMY course serves the same basic purpose as the auto repair course, Breen says. "It enables claim men to deal more effectively with doctors and hospitals since they now know more about medical terms, the seriousness of injuries and their costs."

Breen says the majority of insurance companies today are placing more emphasis on better qualified claim men since their job is becoming increasingly complicated because of the current inflationary period. "Juries are returning higher verdicts, medical expenses are larger, cause of accident losses are higher and accident repair bills," says Breen.

"This increases the insurance company obligation to the policyholder to handle claims in a fair and economical manner as possible."

Shimoda, where Perry's fleet was at anchor. After Perry's departure, the doctor set up a private brewery in his back yard for his personal consumption.

First Brewery in 1872

In 1872, the country's first commercial brewery was built in Yokohama by an American named Copeland, but its product was only for consumption by the foreign colony.

About this time, some cases of beer were imported to Japan, possibly by mistake. The shipment created a stir among Japanese traders who puzzled over the strange liquid and finally called in doctors for consultation.

The doctors decided the brew was a "digestion booster" and the shipment was sold at drug stores as a "wonder medicine." It's popularity grew.

In 1876, the government set up a brewery at Sapporo, Hokkaido, where government agricultural experts had discovered the soil was suited especially for barley and hop plantations. They invited a group of brewing experts from Germany and specimens of barley and hops were imported from Australia.

In 1887, a far-sighted industrialist named Eiichi Shibusawa bought the government plant for 70,000 yen to start the modern brewing industry. The firm operates today under the name of Nippon Breweries LTD, the nation's largest.

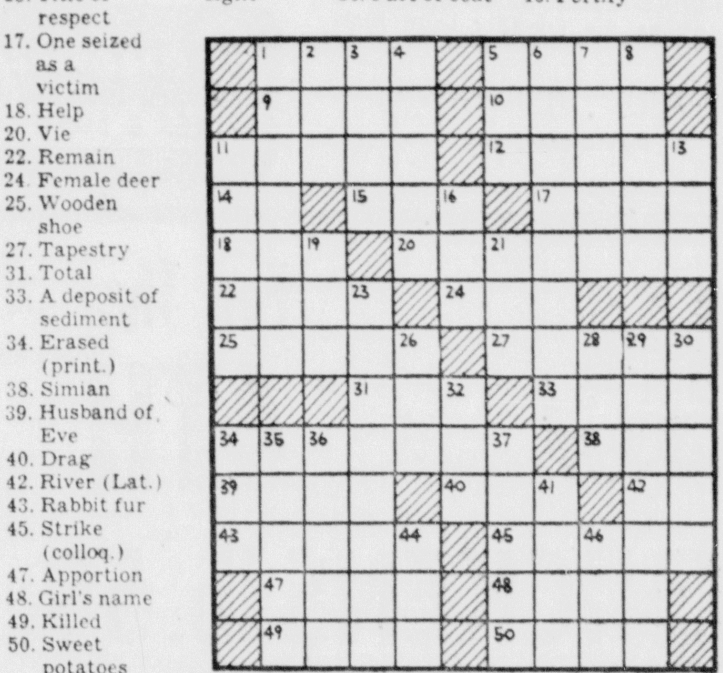

Japanese industrialists lost no time in jumping in on the new market, and, by 1936 there were 15 breweries with a combined output of 6,960,000 gallons a year, a prewar record.

World War two saw a decline in the industry, largely because of economic restrictions, but since the war, breweries have made a fast recovery.

There are now 13 breweries in Japan, operated by three companies.

Bridge Repairs Made by Crews

Post Road To Be Closed Monday

The Bloomingburg-New Holland road, in the vicinity of the north fork of Paint Creek, in Marion Township will be opened to traffic Tuesday evening, July 2, according to Charles P. Wagner, county engineer.

Wagner said the reason for the closing of the road for the past two weeks was due to construction of another abutment at the west end of the bridge over Paint Creek. More than 30 cubic yards of reinforced concrete was used in constructing the new abutment, Wagner said.

The severe cold weather, this area experienced during the past winter has caused a great deal of damage to the county's bridges, Wagner said. The high, fast moving water has cut deep into a number of abutments, and the damage is rapidly becoming apparent, he added.

Starting about Monday, July 9, all traffic on the Post Road in Marion Township between the Madison Road and the Knight Road will be closed so that the bridge over the north fork of Paint Creek may be repaired, according to Wagner.

A new reinforced concrete abutment will be constructed at the east end of the steel truss bridge by the members of the county highway bridge crew. They started work on it Monday (today).

This bridge has been in a weakened condition for the past few years, and Wagner reports that school bus drivers were concerned with crossing the bridge with a full load of children.

The road will probably be opened for traffic on about Friday, July 20, Wagner said.

Degenerate Suicides

The spot is 10-miles from the former Hopewell estate of Charles Lindbergh, whose infant son was kidnapped and murdered nearly 20 years ago.

Son of a Criminal

Seventeen years ago, when Irwin was a boy of 10, his father, a postal clerk, died the same way. He committed suicide while awaiting trial on charges of stealing from the mails.

The greatest manhunt in Jersey history had its beginning in Washington, D. C. last Thursday night.

Wanted throughout the midwest for murder and kidnapping, Irwin came upon a car parked near the Washington Monument.

In it were Miss Barker and her 19-year-old boy friend, Lawrence Gilbert. It was her 17th birthday. He had just given her an engagement ring and planned to take her back to the home of her uncle where a gay surprise party was being arranged.

Irwin shattered all the plans. He shoved a gun at the frightened couple and forced Gilbert to drive to Virginia. There off the main road, he raped the terrified girl while Gilbert helplessly watched a few feet away, bound by adhesive tape.

Shortly after, Irwin let Gilbert go after threatening to kill the girl if he told police before 24 hours elapsed.

Irwin and Miss Barker spent that night in a small Washington hotel. He forced her to submit to him four more times.

Uncle Kidnaped, too

Friday they went to Philadelphia by bus and then to the Washington, Pa. home of Irwin's uncle, George Brewer, a 42-year-old engineer.

At gunpoint, he forced Brewer to drive him and the girl back to Philadelphia to pick up a bag he had checked in a bus station. Brewer told police he had to do as ordered under threat of death to his wife and nine-year-old son.

When they returned to Washington, Irwin pushed Miss Barker into Brewer's car and headed toward New Jersey. The Brewers said Irwin continually boasted he'd never be caught alive.

Two New Jersey state troopers, John Smith and Marion Olfari, spotted the car at about 12:30 P. M. (EST). Irwin had just crossed the Delaware River from Pennsylvania.

They gave chase and drew near at the edge of a hunting preserve owned by State Milk Industry Director Arthur F. Foran, eight miles from here in Mt. Airy.

Irwin, desperately trying to elude capture, swung the car into a dirt road, just missing a ditch.

He jumped out of the car calling for Miss Barker to follow him. She ran toward the officers as Olfari opened fire on Irwin. He darted into a tall wheat field and disappeared.

A motorist took Miss Barker to the Flemington police barracks and the grim hunt for the midwest badman was on.

If he had lived, police say Irwin would have been liable to indictment by the federal government and eight states for crimes demanding the death penalty.

The man who started on his career of crime by stealing money from his mother as a boy, was wanted for the murder of a farmer's wife in Oxford, Mich., on June 8, and kidnapping another woman in Detroit, June 19.

Marijuana Found

the bigger cache in Weatherbee's car, but withheld announcement on the hope that they might be able to arrest hoodlums reported poised to hijack the automobile.

On Thursday and Friday, treasury agents, police and garage mechanics ripped the upholstery from the automobile and unscrewed special steel plates beneath the upholstery.

There they found 193 pounds of marijuana. With the eight pounds recovered earlier, this brought the total to 201 pounds—worth more than $500,000 when rolled into "reefers."

Arrested with Weatherbee were Milford Hayes Woodward, 32, a barber, and Lena Mary Pauline, 33, both of this city.
